THE LEGAL INSIGHT

The Official LSK Weekly Newsletter

LSK JOINT PRESS STATEMENT

The Law Society of Kenya, Amnesty International Kenya, Kenya Human Rights Commission and HAKI Africa, note with deep concern the public statements made by the President of the Republic of Kenya H.E. Dr. William Ruto, issuing a warning to all those who have filed cases in Court over ownership and control of Mumias Sugar Company, to withdraw the said cases and gave them the following options:

1. Wahame Kenya, ama
2. Nitawaweke jela, ama
3. Wasafiri waende mbinguni.

The words taken in their literal sense constitute a threat to persons who are currently involved in court cases over the ownership and control of Mumias Sugar Company. The strong warning comes against the backdrop of the reported abduction and subsequent release of Mr. Jaswant Singh Rai, one of the parties involved in court dispute, over Mumias Sugar Company.

CONTD...

The unfortunate statement by the Head of State, call into question the Government's commitment to upholding the right to life and protection of persons against cruel and inhumane treatment, as well as the right to equal treatment before the law and the right to live anywhere in the Republic of Kenya, and to own property. These rights are guaranteed to every person by the Constitution and cannot be taken away, unless as decreed by the laws of this Country. It is regrettable that the utterances by His Excellency, the President, seem to suggest that he can disregard constitutionally guaranteed rights, at whim.

ADVOCATES COMPLAINTS COMMISSION CALLS ON THE ADVOCATES DISCIPLINARY TRIBUNAL AND THE LAW SOCIETY OF KENYA

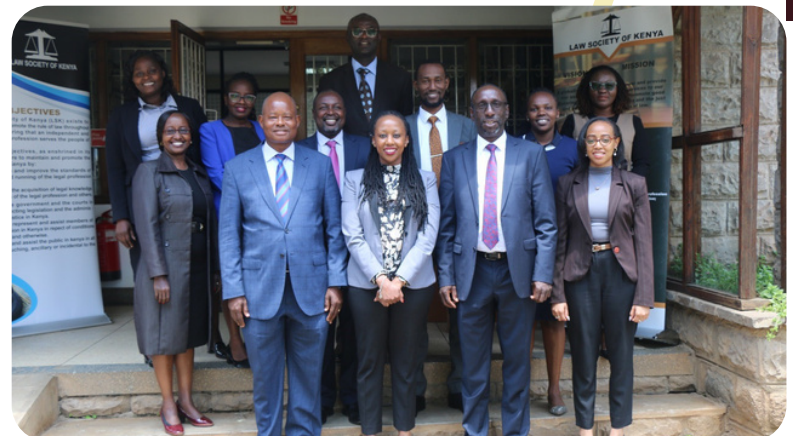

The newly appointed Commissioners of the Advocates Complaints Commission (ACC) led by the Chairperson Hon. Moses Cheboi, paid a courtesy call on the Advocates Disciplinary Tribunal led by Chairperson William Maema and the Law Society of Kenya led by Deputy CEO Mwathi Kitonga. The meeting discussed the importance of collaborations by entrenching bi-annual institutional meetings amongst the three institutions.

The ACC commended the Society for the recently concluded Advocates Disciplinary Tribunal Service Week which was received positively and aided in curbing the backlog of cases. They implored the LSK to consider having regular service weeks as this will ensure the disciplinary process gains credibility and legitimacy in the eyes of both advocates and the public. Further, it was agreed that there is need to raise the visibility of the Disciplinary Tribunal through sensitization and creating awareness amongst advocates and members of the public. In so doing, the Tribunal, LSK and ACC will hold regular webinars.

The three institutions deliberated on other pertinent issues that affected the administration of justice at the Tribunal, and made recommendations for improved performance. This was done in order to cement commitment in ensuring the image of the legal profession is preserved and protected, and in line with the statutory mandate of upholding ethical standards within the legal profession.

In conclusion, the three institutions reiterated their commitment to ensuring the maintenance of professional ethics, upholding the integrity of the legal profession, and safeguarding the interests of the public.

The Advocates Disciplinary Tribunal adjudicates on charges of professional misconduct, preferred against advocates. The LSK Secretariat, through the Compliance and Ethics Directorate, serves as the administrative arm of the Tribunal, while the ACC prosecutes matters before the Tribunal.

13 YEARS YOUNG, A CONSTITUTION UNDER FOCUS.

BY SOPHIE KAIBIRIA

The Constitution of Kenya 2010 recently turned 13. As parents know too well a 13-year-old usually shows signs of wilfulness and tends to push the envelope as they have finally visualized adulthood. They also are at the stage where they face many challenges as they navigate delicately to maturity. It is therefore cognitively apparent that the Constitution has been fonder for governance discourse again at 13 years.

As we go on into this discussion it also important to draw some highlights of the phases that led to our Supreme law. It is hailed as a model Constitution in Africa for being both reform-oriented and human rights-heavy. The Kenyan Constitutional experience equally has regional significance. This is because it informs debates on fundamental issues of the organisation and exercise of political power, and the scope for democracy, social justice, and national cohesion all around the African continent and beyond. Evidentially, Kenya was not alone among African countries in transitioning to multiparty politics in the early 1990s as a great number of countries introduced political pluralism at the time. However, the expectations that first met these changes gradually faded away and there rose the push for further Constitutional reforms. Second was the phase of the inadequacies that were pointed out in managing governance issues that are presented in an African context. A phase that came after the multiparty politics in 1991, struggles for democracy had centered on the twin aims of removing from power the Kenya African National Union (KANU) government under the late President Daniel Arap Moi and effecting constitutional change. At the time, the constant manipulation of elections in 1992 and 1997 intensified the push for governance reforms. The political class and the Constitutional reform advocates at the time realized that the mere tweaking of the constitution to reintroduce multiparty politics was insufficient to entrench and safeguard democracy. According to CJ Emeritus Dr. Willy Mutunga the architecture of power created by the pre-2010 constitution made the effective practice of plural politics impossible and prevented the country's transition from an imperial presidency to a constitutional democracy. This led to the momentous push for Constitutional reform in the 2000s that gave us our current Constitution. Third, is the long-phased post-promulgation period that began in 2018 which is characterized by the top-down approach towards managing issues of representation in government positions. This stage has been characterized by rapid implementation of the Constitutional provisions through legislative reforms and governance restructuring. The result has been murmurs, hiccups, and discontent as not all provisions and political interests have been implemented including the sticking sore area of the actualization of the two-third gender rule in electoral governance.

As we mark 13 years of the Constitution #Wakilis we are again drawn to the debate led by the recently formed National Dialogue Committee. The committee that mutated from the bipartisan talks has crafted issues that may push for Constitutional review. It is at this stage where the importance of the Constitution is to the Nation and the Political class is most visible. It will be a point to reflect on its strength in view of the forces pushing the current National Agenda and in particular since it has been opined that the history of Kenya is marked by false dawns. This includes the similar processes that led to the promulgation of the current constitution. Luckily at the time, the Act Constituting the Committee of Experts was responsive to the voice of the people in providing for an initiative to incorporate national needs as perceived by Wanjiku. As stated by Prof. H.W. O Ogendo in his writing in "The Politics of Constitutional Change in Kenya since Independence, 1963-1969, the adoption of the Westminster tradition into Africa has not led to stable nations. These types of Constitutions according to him did not take into consideration the 'home-grown' nature of customs and conventions of the government. Our very own Constitution sought to move away from this prescription by incorporating the will of the people, the character of interactions, and the existence of customary norms. At 13 years one would need to ask who is failing to breathe life into these very principles stated in the Preamble of the Constitution and the various provisions embedded in the document both in spirit and test.

It is therefore imperative #Wakilis that we are firm in juxtaposing the previous Constitutional review process with the current wave that will tinker with our Constitution. Four questions should be at the back of our minds:

1. Have the initiators of the process consulted the Kenyan People on the most critical political and constitutional issues?
2. Are the issues identified favoring functional operation for the current regime only or are they for prosperity?
3. Has the Constitution been fully implemented to warrant a review?
4. Is there a Constitutional moment?

As we answer that vigilance #Wakilis let us move to protect the rule of law at all times.
